State University of New York— Potsdam, Graduate Programs

In Potsdam, New York

The State University of New York—Potsdam is located in St. Lawrence County in northern New York along the U.S.-Canadian border.

One of the unique aspects of becoming a part of the SUNY Potsdam Graduate community in Potsdam, New York, is the emphasis on experience, not just on your intended degree. SUNY Potsdam believes that your journey to continue your education should motivate you to succeed as a student as well as beyond the walls of the university. Check out this webpage to explore the SUNY Potsdam Difference.

At SUNY Potsdam, each graduate level curriculum is designed to familiarize you with the technical background, pedagogy, and current demands associated with your chosen degree program. Your existence as a learner will extend beyond the classroom, and you will have unlimited support from both the small class sizes and the individual attention professors will provide. In addition, graduate course schedules are uniquely designed to work for you by offering course formats that will fit into your busy schedule.

Graduate programs include a wide variety of education programs, degrees in English and literacy, and business organization-focused courses. Many of these programs are popular with Canadian students who both live in Potsdam and commute from over the border.

The Graduate Scholarship for International Students provides unique benefits designed exclusively for all international students intending to pursue full-time graduate study at SUNY Potsdam. Applicants must have a minimum 3.0 GPA during their bachelor's and submit an online application. The financing received will depend on this application, official academic transcripts, and an essay.
