

EducationUSA Canada Spotlights

John Hopkins University

in Baltimore, MD

John Hopkins University is a place where ambitious, talented, and creative students thrive. Since the university's start in 1876, students in all majors have embraced a spirit of learning through exploration and discovery. As the first research institution in the United States, John Hopkins offers unparalleled resources and connections. The vast John Hopkins network includes schools, centers, and affiliates throughout Baltimore, as well as in the Washington D.C. area, and throughout the world, including campuses in Bologna, Italy and Nanjing, China.

The Homewood campus in Central Baltimore is home base for about 5,300 Hopkins undergraduates. With academic flexibility and over 60% of undergraduates pursuing a double major or minor, students are able to build the academic path that is right for them. Academic and pre-professional advisers along with accessible faculty and supportive staff guide students throughout their time on campus and after they graduate.

More than 75% of undergrads do research of some kind, and many receive support through awards and programs dedicated to funding undergraduate research. Students also take advantage of hands-on learning, study abroad programs, and advanced graduate study that reflect the school's spirit of academic exploration. With access to opportunities typically reserved for graduate students and working professionals, Hopkins students are publishing papers, presenting at conferences, and contributing to the academic landscapes as early as their first year.

Hopkins students are active and engaged, which makes the 140-acre campus in the heart of Baltimore an energized place to live and learn. Students enjoy the close-knit campus community alongside the opportunities Hopkins provides as a major institution with a global reach. Campus life outside the classroom is dynamic, with more than 400 student groups—from dance, acappella, and cultural groups to international service organizations—and a robust athletics program with 12 men's teams and 10 women's teams.

Baltimore is an extension of campus where students enjoy the best of both worlds: An easily accesible city with all of the networking, museums, entertainment, and amazing food of a major urban center. As a mid-size city on the east coast, Baltimore is a thriving entrepreneurial hub that offers plentiful internship, career, and volunteer opportunities for students and young professionals eager to make their mark.

